TA descends one of the many ladders in the Khumbu Icefall on Mount Everest.

“Mountains are my teachers. They exact deep lessons.”

After summiting Denali in 2005, TA set a goal of climbing all of the seven summits, the highest peaks on each of the seven continents. TA shares the joys, rewards, pain, and heartbreak of training for and climbing the world's highest mountains.

TA's recent book, More than a Mountain: One Woman's Everest, has received much positive acclaim.

TA regularly inspires audiences big and small with multimedia presentations of her various climbs and adventures. She is a gifted speaker and photographer who has her audiences laughing out loud one moment and deep in thought the next. TA tailors each presentation to the unique needs of the audience from national conferences to small, intimate workshops. Her highly entertaining and inspiring speeches overflow with passion for adventures of the body, mind, and soul.

What people are saying about TA...

“We were all so touched and motivated by your presentation. I am sure that many people have told you that you are a fabulous speaker. Women, specifically, could really learn and benefit from you. So often we see things in life as being such huge overwhelming tasks instead of looking at obstacles as just an opportunity to learn about ourselves, to grow and to realize that our possibilities are limitless if we just take that first step. So bravo to you for leading the way.”

“TA has spoken at our school on several occasions and each time she inspires the students to dream big. She has a gift that enables her to make everyone feel that they are as much a part of the adventure as she is.”

“It will never be said that TA is a dreamer who is content to do only that, leaving her very lofty goals safely tucked inside her mind, never to appear. TA has and is making more of a difference than most of us could ever imagine for ourselves. TA has already made history that will be remembered for years to come. TA has made very positive impressions on people who will likely always be grateful to her for it. TA still has so much more to give and I for one, am looking forward to seeing what else she has in store.”
